Terry Rowinski Named President at Health Payment Systems

MILWAUKEE (Nov. 15, 2016) – Terry Rowinski has been named president at Health Payment Systems effective November 9, 2016. Rowinski is being elevated from his previous role as chief operating officer. Jay Fulkerson, will continue in his role as CEO.

In his role as president, Rowinski will drive growth and business strategy as well as day-to-day operations for the Milwaukee-based healthcare technology company.

“We are focused on our mission of ending healthcare billing confusion by accelerating our goal of placing a consolidated, easy-to-understand bill into the hands of every American consumer,” says Rowinski. “Our consumer-centric solution gives self-insured employers, health systems and Accountable Care Organizations a singularly unique opportunity to simplify the healthcare billing process.”

Rowinski’s rise at the company is a testament to his leadership and strategic focus on developing a culture of employee engagement and collaboration. His leadership in his previous roles of Chief Operating Officer and Chief Information Officer has helped Health Payment Systems enhance its IT and operational infrastructure.

Rowinski joined Health Payment Systems in 2014. Prior to that, he served as the COO for BuySeasons Inc., a Wisconsin-founded specialist Internet retail organization. He has more than 25 years of executive management experience and a deep understanding of technology and business process optimization.
